ON THE VALUE OF BLOOD

A LETTER SUGGESTED BY CONSID-ERATION OF SENATOR HOAR.

The Ancestry of Senator Sherman, Senator Evarts, Senator Cameron, Roscoe Conkling, Senator Butler, Senator Barbour, Senator Washburn and Others. [Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.-Sitting in the enate gallery, looking down upon the round head of Senator Hoar, who of late has attracted so much attention as the champion of the federal election bill and as the writer of a quaint letter concerning his life and his income, I am led to the re-flection that blood will tell. George Frisble Hoar has been forty years in public life. His father, Samuel Hoar, was the famous lawyer who was sent by the Massachusetts legislature to Charleston, S. C., to test the constitutionality of certain slave laws, and who was expelled from the state by the governor. Samuel Hoar was once a mem-ber of congress. Ebenezer Rockwood Hoar, a brother of the senator, was attorney general under Grant, and also served in congress. Here are three statesmen in one family—father and two sons. On the maternal side George Frisbie and Ebenezer Rockwood Hoar are grandsons of Roger

Side by side in the senate chamber sit Senators Hoar and Sherman, the latter di-rectly descended from the Shermans of New England. Roger Sherman, a native of Massachusetts, settled in Connecticut, where he worked as a shoemaker, with an open book before him on the beach. He was a member of the First congress, signed the Declaration of Independence and became a senator. One of his grandsons was Charles R. Sherman, who migrated to Ohio in 1810 and became judge of the supreme court of that state. Three sons were born to him. One, Charles T. Sher-man, became United States district judge in Ohio. Another is Gen. William Tecamseh Sherman, and the third John Sherman, the veteran senator who sits by the side of his distant relative, George Frisbie Hoar.

By another curious coincidence Senator Evarts, of New York, sits within arm's reach of Senators Hoar and Sherman. Mr. Evarts was the son of Jeremiah Evarts, a lawyer and writer of note in Boston, and on his mother's side was a grandson of the same Roger Sherman mentioned above whose statue stands in Statuary hall. Mention of the senator from New York reminds me of New York's greatest senator, Roscoe Conkling. Mr. Conkling's father, Alfred, was a member of congress and min-ister to Mexico, and his brother, Frederick A., was a member of congress. In the Thirty-seventh congress both Roscoe Conkling and his brother were members.

Senator Don Cameron, who sits near by Hoar and Sherman, married a daughter of Judge Charles T. Sherman, Senator Cameron's father was the famous Simon Cam-Magnificent Harbor. A million and a half eron, who was four times elected to the senate, and who was succeeded by his son. Don Cameron's chum is Senator Butler, of South Carolina. Senator Butler studied law with his uncle, Andrew Pickens Butler, who was for lifteen years a senator from that state. Another of the present Senator Butler's uncles was William Butler, who served in congress and who mar-ried a sister of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry. Still another Butler, Samson H., represented South Carolina in congress a half century ago.
All the Butlers of that state were descendants of Pierce Butler, who was of the family of the Dukes of Ormond of Ireland. Before the Revolution be was a major in a British regiment in Boston, but afterward became a citizen of this country, and a Re-publican instead of a royalist. He was a delegate to the first congress, signed the constitution, and was a senator in congress at the same time Roger Sherman was. Moreover, the two men were good friends. Pierce M. Butler, son of Pierce Butler, was a gallant general in the Mexican war, falling at Cherubusco. Thus the Butler family of South Carolina has produced three United States senators. His father, Cadwalader C., was in congress six or eight years from Wisconsin. His uncle, Israel, Jr., was for ten years a member of congress from Maine, and afterward gov-ernor of that state. Another uncle, Elihu B., spelling his name with a itual "e," was in congress fourtern years from Illinois, finally becoming by his long experience "the father of the house." He was afterward the American minister to Paris dur-ing the Franco-Prussian war. His son, Hempstead Washburne, is ambitious to come to congress from Chicago, where he congressmen this country has ever known were the Heisters, of Pennsylvania. Daniel Heister, of Berks county, was a mem-ber of the First, Second, Third and Fourth congresses. He then removed to Maryland, and was elected member of the Seventh and Eighth congresses. His brother, Joseph Heister, equipped a company from his private fortune and joined the Revolutionary army. He was a member of the Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Fourteenth, Fifteenth and Sixteenth congresses and was afterward elected governor of Pennsylvania. John Heister, Daniel's brother, was a member of the Tenth concross, and his son Daniel succeeded him in he Eleventh congress. William Heister, a nephew of John and Daniel, was a memor of the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth ongresses. William's son Isaac, who changed the spelling of his name to Hies-ter, was a member of the Thirty-third con-

In the last congress Daniel Voorhees was a member of one branch, and his son of the either. In the last congress Isaac Stephen-son was a mumber from Wisconsin. His brother Sam is a member of the present congress from Michigan. Henry St. George Tucker, now in congress from Virginia, represents a notable family of lawmakers. His father, John Randolph Tucker, was one of the ablest men in congress ten years ago. His uncle, beverly Tucker, was thirty years age public printer and a well known editor and politician. His grandfather, Henry St. George Tucker, was a representative in congress from 1815 to 1818. Servical other Tuckers have been prominent in

During the Revolution he was known as "Light Horse Harry." At the time of Washington's death he was a member of congress, and delivered the eulogy on Washington in the house of representatives. His brother, Charles Lee, was appointed attorney general of the United States by President Washington. Elijah Adams Morse, now a member of congress from Canton, Mass., claims to be a relative of the Adams family, and repre nts the same district once represented by John Quincy Adams. The grandfather of Senator Wilson, of Maryland, was a dele-gate to the Continental congress and a signer of the Declaration of Independence. An American family which ranks with the Adamses is now represented in the White House. Six Harrisons of the stock whence the president comes have been conspicuous in the public service, two as senators and presidents and the others as representatives in congress or members of state governments. Congressman Richard P. Bland, the well known silver specialist of Missouri, comes from stock in which "blood tells." His grandfather was a delegate to the Conti-nental congress. His great-grandfather, Theodoric Bland (who was also the uncle of John Randolph), was a member of the First congress, and the first member of congress whose death was announced in congress whose death was announced in that body. He enjoyed the confidence of George Washington, and his correspond-ence with eminent men was published in 1843 as "The Bland Papers," One of his sons, also Theodoric Bland, became United States judge in Maryland. New England. His father, Nathan F. Dixon, was between 1840 and 1860 one of the most prominent men of the little state, serving constantly in the general assembly or in congress. The present senator's grand-father was also a Rhode Island statesman, serving seventeen years in the general assembly of the state and six years in the somewhat remarkable case of son father and grandfather representing a state in the national legislature, and all were named Nathan F. Dixon. All lived at Westerly, R. I., all were lawyers and all graduated from Brown university. Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, is directly descended from the famous Wolcotts of Connecticut. His great-grandfather, Oliver Wolcott, signed the Declaration of In-Connecticut. Senator Brown, of Georgia, comes from that branch of the Brown family which contributed many eminent men to the ros-ter of fame in North Carelina, Virginia and Kentucky. Among his relatives were Aaron V. Brown, who served in congress from Tennessie, and who was postmuster general under Buchanan: Albert G. Brown, who went from Virginia to Mississippi, and there became judge, congressman and enator, James Brown, of Virginia, who was senator from Louislana and minister to France, and John Brown, of Virginia, who left Princeton college to join the army of Washington and who afterward became member of congress and United States senator from Kentacky. This Brown's son, Mason Brown, was a prominent judge, and J. M., became noted men, the former as senator from Missouri and the latter as a brigadier general. Robert Graves.

A Boy with Many Wives.

Polygamy seems to be practiced more on the wholesale order in East. India than in any other quarter of the globe. Recently a Brahmin of Bengal gave away his six aunts, eight sisters and four daughters in a batch in marriage to a boy less than 10 years old. The ages of the brides of three generations varied from 50 years to three onths, and the baby bride was brought to the marriage ceremony on a brass plate.

Baby One Solid Rash

Ugly, Painful, Blotched, Malicious. No Rest Day or Night. Cured by Cutieura Remedies

Our oldest child, now six years of age, when an infant six months old, was attacked with a virulent, malignant skin disease. All ordinary remedies failing, we called our family physician, who attempted to cure it; but it aprend with almost incredible rapidity, and the lower portion of the little fellow's person, from the middle of his back down to his kness, was one solid rash, ugly, painful, blocched, and malicious. We had no rest at night, no peace by day. Finally, we were advised to try the CUTICURA HYMEDIAS. The effect simply marvellous. In three or four weeks a complete cure was wrought, leaving the little fellow's person as white and healthy as though he had never been attacked. In my opinion, your valuable remedies saved his life, and today he is a strong, healthy child, perfectly well, no repetition of the disease having ever occurred: GEO, SMITH.
